

Monitor Performance and Maintain Value with Mining Sampling

Managing quality control, determining valuations, and monitoring the performance of extraction processes requires a unique focus on efficiency and the bottom line. Whether mining oil sands, precious metals, alumina, or aggregate, data from sampling is fundamental for peak operational performance.

Protect your valuable assets and bottom line through the security Sentry Equipment samplers offer. Our sampling equipment can be used in various applications in the mining industry, including powders, liquids, and slurries. Sentry's solutions help mining operations provide a seamless addition to their already robust mining applications.

Sites involved in mining operations have the opportunity to sample at multiple locations such as:

- Prospecting – Depending on customer need, bulk solid or slurry can be sampled to determine the amount of material extracted to maximize production decisions.
- Processing – Regardless of the material broken down, extracted, and processed, how the final material is delivered is crucial. Mining operations can maximize efficiency by using sampling to improve production processes continuously.
- Load Out/Custody Transfer – Sampling media to confirm particle size, density, and purity of mined materials ensures that your bottom line is supported and validates your production.
- Environmental Safety – As mining impacts local perceptions and environments, ensuring you reduce your waste by using sampling protects operations and ensures you are effectively safeguarding local communities.
